The Simla Conference, 1945

- Viceroy Wavell called for Simla Conference (24 June-14 July, 1945) for setting up a new Executive Council at the centre-practically Indian in composition-excepting the Commander-in-chief and Viceroy.
- The Council would have equal representation from the 'Caste-Hindus' and Muslims.
- The Congress refused to be treated as a 'Caste

Hindu' body and staked the right to select the representatives of any community as the congress nominess to the council.

- Abdul Kalam Azad and Abdul Gaffar Khan went to Simla as a Congress delegate.
- The League wanted to be the sole Spokesman of Indian Muslims.
- League demanded a communal vote by asking for a two-third majority in the proposed council on any decision opposed by the Muslim members (or League members).
- Wavell dissolved the Conference his action implied the League is claim to speak for all Muslims was recognized. Thereafter, the satisfaction of the League became a pre-requisite to any major settlement.
- Holding of new election for the Indian legislatures in the winder of 1945-46 was announced.

Elections and the Cabinet Mission, 1946

- The League, following the Simla conference and dangling of the carrot of Pakistan by the British was in favourable situation to deal with its separate Muslim electorate.
- The Congress won 57 out of 102 seats in the Central Legislative Assembly and obtained majorities in all provinces except Sind, Punjab and Bengal.
- The League polled 86 percent of the Muslim votes and won all the 30 Muslim seats in the Central Legislative Assembly.
- League lost NWEF and Assam to Congress and failed to dislodge Unionists from Punjab.
- Cabinet Mission constituted of three British Cabinet Members.
 - Pethrick Lawrence-Secretary of State for India
 - Staford Cripps-President of the Board of Trade
 - A.V. Alexander-First Lord of Admiral
- The Mission rejected the demand for a full-fledged Pakistan (Comprising the whole of all the Muslim majority areas).
- The Mission reasoned that the right of communal self-determination, if conceded to Muslims, had also to be granted to the non-Muslims who formed majorities in West Bengal and Eastern Punjab, as well as in Assam proper.

- The 'truncated' or smaller Pakistan was unacceptable to the League.
- The Mission offered the plan of a very loose union of all the Indian territories under a centre that would control merely the defence, the Foreign Affairs and the Communications, leaving all other subjects to the existing provincial legislatures.
- The provincial legislatures would then elect a Constituent Assembly.
- The members so elected will divide up into three sections.
 - Section A- Non Muslim Majority provinces (Bombay, United Provinces, Bihar, Central Provinces, Orissa, Madras)
 - Section B- Muslim Majority provinces in the north-west (Sind, North Western Frontier Province and Punjab).
 - Section C- Muslim Majority provinces in North east (Bengal, Assam).
- All these sections would have the authority to draw up provincial constitutions and even group constitutions.
- The Mission proposed a short term measure- the formation, immediately, of an interim government at the centre constituted by major political parties, and with the Indians holding all the portfolios.
- At the outset, both the Congress and League were inclined to accept it but problem soon emerged in July 1946.
- The League interpreted the groupings to be compulsory. NWFP (in B) and Assam (in C) would be reduced to minorities within their section. Hence, in future a wholesome Pakistan could become a reality if Section B and Section C provinces so desired.
- The Congress wanted the grouping to be optional. It opposed absence of any elected members from the princely states in the Constituent Assembly.
- The Congress dropped its demand for electing the members of Constituent Assembly on the basis of Universal Adult Franchise.

The Communal Carnage And Interim Government

- Muslim League announced the Direct Action Day on 16 August 1946. Widespread Hindu-Muslim riots occurred throughout the country.
- An interim Government in accordance with

Cabinet Mission's proposal at the centre came into existence in September, 1946, when the Congress leaders formed a Cabinet under the leadership of Jawaharlal Nehru. Muslim League refused to join initially.

- Wavell persuaded the League leaders to join on 26 October 1946.
- The Interim government, obstructed by its League members and bureaucracy was reduced to a figure head and was unable to control the communal carnage.
- The League refused to participate in the Constituent Assembly which met on 9 December, 1946.

- The Muslim League began a civil disobedience campaign in Punjab to bring down the coalition government headed by Khizr Kayat Khan of the Unionist Party.

The 3rd June Plan of Mountbatten

- The League's demand would be accommodated by creating Pakistan, but it would be made as small as possible.
- Mountbatten supported the Congress stand that the princely states must not be given the option of independence.
- Mountbatten considered it vital to retain the goodwill of the Congress.

- The Plan declared that power would be handed over by 15 August 1947 on the basis of dominion status to India and Pakistan.
- The speed with which the country was partitioned enabled the British to forsake of responsibility for the worsening communal situation.
